JTK Consulting respects and is committed to your privacy. We may collect or get information from you in order to respond to any electronic (email or otherwise) communication from you regarding our services, firm or our website. Any information we receive from you will be held private in accordance with the professional standards of confidentiality and the law. The Internet (World Wide Web) has its own unique privacy concerns. E-mail communication is subject to interception, intentional or otherwise, by third parties. Furthermore, acts by third parties to intentionally "hack" onto others' computers is a common dilemma with the Internet. Therefore, fool-proof security of your information sent across to us cannot be guaranteed and JTK Consulting or any of its advocates, consultants or employees or directors or owners shall have no responsibility or liability towards any security breach committed by any third parties, intentionally or otherwise.
